

AWG's ASU assessment -- as to whether countries meet the substantive standard set out in the ASU

ASU means the OECD's Aircraft Sector Understanding on Export Credits for Civil Aircraft for eligibility for the CTC discount.

AWG assesses whether countries meet the substantive standards set out in the ASU for eligibility for the Cape Town Convention discount as set out in the 2011 ASU (CTC discount).

The AWG assessment is independent of the OECD (and its participants) and their decision-making on eligibility for the CTC discount under the ASU. It assesses the substantive ASU standard without reference to whether a country is on the 'Cape Town list', as defined in the ASU.

AWG has prepared an explanation and methodology for this assessment.

The basic framework for that methodology is as follows:

- Eligibility for the CTC discount requires satisfaction of the three conditions below: conditions 1 (making of the ASU 'qualifying declarations'), condition 2 (compliant implementation: primacy and completeness), and condition 3 (compliant precedent and experience: judicial and administrative).
- As the making of the qualifying declarations is a threshold requirement for meeting the substantive standard for the CTC discount, where condition 1 has not been satisfied (qualifying declarations have not been made), scoring on conditions 2 and 3 (compliant implementation and precedent and experience, respectively) have not been provided. To see such scores, see full compliance index.
- Where there is insufficient legal analysis to reach a sound view on conditions 2 and 3 (compliant implementation and precedent and experience, respectively), scoring on such conditions have not been provided (and is not available on the full compliance index).
